

Haunted Hotel...

Other ghostlike figures also have taken up long-term residence. They include the "Pink Lady," a young woman in Victorian dress who is surrounded by a rosy mist and who hangs out at the Omni Grove Park Inn. She is purported to be a guest who stayed at that Asheville, North Carolina, property in the 1920s, fell to her death and now haunts the hotel.

It's a Lady in White that spooks the Hotel Alex Johnson in Rapid City, South Dakota, and she is joined by the man for whom the building is named. So many reports of spooky activity have been reported that a "Ghost Journal" in which guests record their unexplainable experiences is kept at the front desk.

While checking out the Hotel Monteleone in New Orleans, the International Society for Paranormal Research made contact with more than a dozen earthbound entities. They documented a restaurant door that is kept locked yet opens and closes, an elevator which stops at the wrong floor and ghostly images of children playing.

The top window in the tower of the Casa Monica Hotel in St. Augustine, Florida, is the center of attention for people seeking to spot the presence of Franklin Smith. He was the architect who opened the property in 1888 but soon ran into financial difficulties and sold it.

After extensive and expensive renovations, the hotel was transformed into a haven for those seeking a luxurious throwback to the Gilded Age of the late 19th century. Continues on next page
